What can the Fulton Library do for UVU Faculty?

The Fulton Library's librarians and staff are dedicated to supporting the teaching and research needs of UVU's faculty; we provide access to high-quality information sources and technology, instructional support in the classroom and online, and more. Explore this guide to learn the many ways the library can assist you as UVU faculty!

The library, wherever you are.

- Library Instruction: Our librarians can help your students learn how to do research at an academic library and develop information literacy skills. See this page to learn how to schedule instruction or learn about available online learning resources.
- Research Resources: The tools on this page can help you with your own research and publishing, as well as support your students' classroom research projects.
- Program Proposals: Subject librarians can help with the library portion of proposals for new programs.

If you have questions or need any assistance using the library, please don't hesitate to ask using the contact information included in this guide. We're here to help lighten your load!

Keep reading this page for an overview of the library's services for faculty.

Faculty Services from the Fulton Library

Subject Librarians & Research Assistance

Each UVU department has an assigned subject librarian you can contact for help locating research and using library resources, identifying possible publishing outlets, and determining how often and where you've been cited. If you have a student research assistant or research team, you are more than welcome to direct them to your subject librarian for library instruction or help developing a literature review search strategy. Your subject librarian can also purchase new books and videos for the collections, in support of your research or classroom curriculum.

Find your librarian and their contact information using our Subject Librarians list.

Course Reserves

Our Course Reserves help connect students with the library resources they need to succeed in your classes. Copyright assistance is available to help determine what resources can be used in your classroom or Canvas course.

- Online library resources such as streaming videos, articles, and book chapters can be added directly to your Canvas course by our Electronic Reserves Specialist for easy access by students and faculty.
- Physical items such as textbooks and DVDs can be placed in our Textbook Reserves at the 1st floor Circulation Desk. Items in this collection typically check out for 2 hours at a time.

To add materials to reserves or for questions about these services, see our Reserves for Faculty page.

Equipment Check Out

Faculty can check out the following equipment from the library at no cost:

- Webcams

- Library Equipment Collection
  The library also has an equipment collection for current UVU students, including laptops, Wi-Fi hotspots, cameras, chargers, study supplies, and more! Help spread the word by directing students to our Library Equipment Collection page for more information.

Book Delivery & Proxy Borrowing

- Book Delivery Form
  Request books or other library materials for delivery directly to your office or department by completing this online delivery form. We can deliver materials anywhere on the Orem and West campus, and we send requested items to the Wasatch campus weekly.
- Proxy Checkout Form
  You can designate another person to pick up library materials for you by completing this online Proxy Checkout Form.

Sutherland Archives

The George Sutherland Archives hosts a variety of physical and digital collections related to UVU and local history. Archives and digitization librarians regularly collaborate with faculty so that students can have an opportunity to work with archival materials. In addition, they also work with faculty to archive documents and materials that may be of scholarly value.

Suggestions for Purchase

The library values purchase suggestions from faculty, to assist in developing a library collection that aligns with UVU's academic curriculum and to ensure students and faculty have access to the materials they need to succeed. You can make purchase suggestions two ways:

- Suggestions for Purchase Form
  Submit requests for books, videos, databases, journals, and other materials using our Suggestions for Purchase form. Subscriptions for ongoing resources such as databases and journals are subject to review by a library selection committee and the campus PBA cycle.
- Contact Your Subject Librarian
  You can also email your subject librarian directly with your purchase requests for books and videos.

Open Educational Resources

Subject librarians can help you learn more about and locate open educational resources (OER) in your discipline. More details are available on the library's OER page.
