COAMFTE

Commission on Accreditation for Marriage and Family Therapy Education

We are pleased to announce that the UVU MFT program is accredited by the Commission on Accreditation for Marriage and Family Therapy Education (COAMFTE). For information about the accreditation process and the benefits of COAMFTE Accreditation for students, go to www.coamfte.org.

Program Description

The UVU Master in Marriage and Family Therapy (MFT) trains students to be professionally competent in the field of marriage and family therapy. Through the application of systemic theories, skills, and ethics, students are prepared to serve a diverse client population. Students who successfully complete the program, including academic course work and supervised clinical practica, are eligible for employment and licensure as an Associate Marriage and Family Therapist in the state of Utah. This program is offered in collaboration with the Behavioral Science Department and the family science undergraduate degree.

Program Mission

Across a broad range of clinical employment settings, marriage and family therapists seek to improve the quality of life for individuals, couples, and families. The UVU Marriage and Family Therapy program emphasizes professional competence and stewardship within the local community. With an emphasis on systemic theories, clinical skills and professional ethics, the MFT program prepares graduates for licensure and employment in marriage and family therapy. The training of marriage and family therapy students champions inclusion through self-awareness and respect toward all people.

Why choose Marriage and Family Therapy?

Marriage and Family Therapists provide therapy to individuals, couples, families, and groups. MFTs work in a variety of settings including outpatient and hospital sites, agencies, and private practice. Marriage and Family Therapy approaches treatment from a systems perspective, which means that these therapists view people and problems in context. MFTs seek to empower their clients by focusing on individual resiliencies and contextual resources. For more information about Marriage and Family Therapy, go to the AAMFT website and click on Learn about MFTs.

In the 2019 U.S. News Best Job Rankings, Marriage and Family Therapists ranked #8 in Best Social Service Jobs and #75 in the top 100 Best Jobs list.

According to Utah DWS Occupation Information, marriage and family therapists are "expected to experience much faster than average employment growth with a moderate volume of annual job openings. Business expansion, as opposed to the need for replacements, will provide the majority of job openings in the coming decade. Job prospects are expected to be good for marriage and family therapists, particularly in rural areas or other communities that are underserved by mental health practitioners."

How to Apply

To apply to the MFT program, submit a completed application to the UVU Recruit system by clicking on Apply Now.

A complete MFT application includes the following items:

1. UVU required demographic information including educational history
2. Transcripts demonstrating in-progress or completion of a Bachelor's degree from a regionally accredited university.
3. A cumulative GPA of at least 3.0
 1. Or last 60 credits GPA of 3.0 or higher
4. MFT Supplemental Items, which include a curriculum vita (CV), CV Statement, Essay, Licensure Statement, and three Letters of Recommendation. These items are described in more detail below.

MFT Curriculum Vita:

Applicants need to submit a copy of their current Curriculum Vita (CV). The CV should include:

- Educational and practical experiences related to professional helping. These experiences could include things like psychoeducation, mentoring, or volunteer work with vulnerable populations.
- Specific experiences, skills, and/or preparation that demonstrate a commitment to working with diverse populations.

MFT Curriculum Vita Statement:

Applicants need to submit a 1-2 page explanation of experiences listed on the CV. This Statement should address each of the following areas:

- Work and professional experiences that led to an interest in MFT
- Skills gained that will lead to success as a student in MFT
- Interactions with diverse populations that created a foundation for training in MFT.
- Specific interest in MFT at UVU.

MFT Essay:

Applicants need to submit a 2-3 page essay that addresses future career plans for marriage and family therapy. This essay should address each of the following areas:

- Potential biases that may affect your work with diverse populations.
- How biases will be addressed so that you will be ready to work with all clients.
- What will professional and clinical competence look like for you as an MFT
- What clinical population you hope to work with after graduation

MFT Licensure:

Applicants need to submit a 1-page statement that indicates an understanding of MFT licensing requirements in Utah (and any other state the applicant anticipates working in the future). This statement should include:

- Demonstration of understanding the licensure process and application, post-graduate supervision, and exam requirements

Letters of Recommendation:

Applicants need to submit 3 letters of recommendation, at least 2 of which should be from individuals who are capable of describing the applicant's educational ability.

- Applicants will submit Recommender Names and Email Addresses.
- Recommenders will be asked to indicate their relationship to the applicant.
- Recommenders will be asked specific questions about the applicant's academic readiness for an MFT program, ethical behavior, interpersonal skills, and potential to work with diverse clients.
- Recommenders may also attach a letter in .pdf or .docx format.

Things to Consider Before you Apply

Accreditation

We value COAMFTE accreditation and hope to be accredited in the future. The UVU MFT program plans to seek accreditation as soon as the program is eligible and ready to do so. However, we can't guarantee programmatic accreditation decisions or timing because those processes are outside of our control.

While accreditation can expedite the licensing process, it is not necessary to graduate from an accredited program to obtain an MFT License in Utah.

To support our graduates in becoming licensed as MFTs in Utah, the UVU program curriculum and clinical hour requirements align with the educational requirements established in the Marriage and Family Therapist Licensing Act Rule, R156-60b.

MFT Degree Portability Acknowledgment Form

Each state's professional licensing board establishes minimum education and experience expectations, which a program or graduate must meet to establish eligibility for a license in that state. Each state's licensing requirements are unique to that state; some states have similar requirements and other states vary greatly.

The UVU MFT Program is designed only to meet education and experience requirements for provisional licensure in Utah. Any applicant intending to pursue licensure in a state other than Utah should note that the licensing process in another state could require additional coursework and/or clinical hours. It is each applicant's responsibility to compare licensing requirements in the state they wish to pursue a license to the courses offered and hours required by the UVU MFT program.

Acknowledgment. If you are admitted to an upcoming MFT cohort, you will be asked to sign and return this Degree Portability Acknowledgment Form.

Because we are in the process of pursuing initial accreditation as a program, we are actively seeking to align with the accreditation standards published on the COAMFTE website: www.coamfte.org. One of the standards requires that all programs provide "evidence that before students begin their program of study, students acknowledge in writing they have been informed and are aware that licensing regulations may differ across states and provinces." To be compliant with that requirement, we have attached the acknowledgment form that we ask candidates to sign before they are enrolled in the MFT program.

For further clarification of program policies, we strongly encourage all candidates to read the MFT Program Handbook and MFT Practicum Handbook prior to applying to the program.

Personal Disposition

Most family therapy training programs employ both didactic and experiential teaching methods, in addition to supervised practice. Experiential methods frequently include asking students to attend personal therapy, and to explore their family of origin, personal biases, and emotional reactions. It is not uncommon for faculty and supervisors to challenge a student's thinking process, emotional reactivity, or professionalism. Although the MFT faculty do not intentionally attempt to provoke emotional reactions from students, it is important for students to understand that there may be times throughout the program when they feel emotionally vulnerable.

One ongoing aspect of the program's evaluation of student readiness for clinical work is that of professional disposition. Students are assessed on their professional attitudes and beliefs, and their receptiveness to feedback and challenges, including how students demonstrate these through verbal and non-verbal behaviors. These behaviors are subject to ongoing evaluation as part of the student's professional temperament.

Faculty members and supervisors are professional gatekeepers, who have an ethical responsibility to ensure that students, trainees, and supervises are both academically and personally or emotionally prepared to remain helpful during intense clinical situations and crises. A student who is uncomfortable with being challenged or who expects to experience emotional safety in every aspect of the program should not enroll in the UVU MFT program.

Students should note that they may face remediation processes, which could result in dismissal from the program, for personal behavior that does not meet program standards.
