Faculty Web Pages Using Digital Measures Data

We have been working to improve the faculty online directory for some time, and new pages will be launched June 2, 2021. All full-time faculty will have a landing page.

These pages will rely on Digital Measures portfolio information to display basic contact information. Data from the highlighted areas below may be displayed on faculty's web page:

In addition, there are options for faculty to select items such as publications or classes taught to be displayed on this page using a button called "Allow Sharing". Due to the development needed, these fields are all set to "Yes" by default.

If a section does not have the "Allow Sharing" option, none of its data will be available to display on the web page.

Faculty have the option to share only basic contact information such as name, email, phone, etc. and the brief biography in your portfolio (if you have entered one). Additional items with the "Allow Sharing" button are found under the section highlighted above and are set to "Yes" by default. These are common items from a faculty CV. If you do not want to have entered items within these areas shared, you need to go into your portfolio and turn the "Allow Sharing" button to "No" on those items before June 2nd. You can also change your mind any time after June 2, 2021 as to which items you want to share. Simply use the "Allow Sharing" button to toggle it on or off for each item.

The portfolio is separate from the workflow module and has a different security structure. This means that anything the workflow module is used to submit, such as annual reviews or RTP documents, cannot be shared on your landing page.
