WHAT TYPE OF HOUSING CAN YOU LIVE IN?

Near-Campus Apartment Complexes

Since UVU doesn't have on-campus housing, many students turn to Near-Campus Apartment Complexes. These complexes often cater specifically to students, offering amenities like study rooms, fitness centers, and social events. The UVU Housing Program partners with different off-campus complexes to host events at least twice a month per complex that are free to all. Living in such complexes can provide a sense of freedom while still maintaining a connection to campus life and fellow students.

Off-Campus Houses, Apartments, or Basement Apartments

Renting a house or apartment off-campus with friends is another popular choice, especially for juniors & seniors. This option offers the most independence and can often be more cost-effective when shared among multiple students. However, this option also comes with increased responsibilities, such as paying utilities, managing landlord relationships, and potentially longer commutes to campus.

Factors Influencing Housing Decisions:

When choosing housing, students should consider several factors:

- Budget: This often plays a primary role in decision-making. Students need to factor in not just rent, but also utilities, food, and transportation costs.
- Location: Proximity to campus, public transportation, and amenities like grocery stores and laundromats is crucial.
- Personal Preferences: Some students thrive in social environments, while others prefer quieter, more private spaces.
- Academic Goals: Living situation can impact study habits and academic performance.
- Safety: The security of the housing and surrounding neighborhood should be a top priority.
- Length of Commitment: Some options may require year-long leases, while others offer more flexibility.
- Future Plans: Students should consider how their housing needs might change as they progress through college.

The ideal housing situation varies greatly from student to student. While some may flourish in the bustling environment of a near-campus apartment complex, others might prefer the independence of a shared house or the affordability of a basement apartment. The key is for students to honestly assess their needs, preferences, and financial situation to find a living arrangement that supports their academic goals and enhances their college experience.

BUDGET FOR HOUSING

KNOW YOUR BUDGET AND NEEDS

Before you begin your housing search ensure you have a good idea of the your budget and the potential needs. Things to consider:

HOW TO FIND A ROOMMATE

@uvuhousing

MOVE IN WITH FRIENDS

Already have a friend or two you'd like to live with? Great! When you apply for an apartment, make sure you list each others' names on your applications.

ROOMMATE MATCHING

Don't have someone in mind? No problem. Most student housing complexes offer a roommate matching system to pair you with roommates who are similar to you. Just fill out the get to know you questions on your application so they can help you find a good match.

CHOOSE YOUR OWN

Want to select your own roommate? Easy. We partner with different organizations to help students find their own roommates. You can view their profiles and find someone you match with. You can send them a message and start searching for the perfect place. Think of it as a dating profile... but for finding a roommate.

Move into your apartment with confidence! Whether you are moving out for the first time or changing apartment complexes UVU offers a vibrant and welcoming atmosphere designed to ease your move. As part of your moving experience, the UVU Housing team is dedicated to making you feel at home right from the start.

AVOIDING SCAMS

Unfortunately, rental listing scams on housing search websites are common in the US. However, learning how to spot these scams can protect you from becoming the victim of a scammer. Using the tips below, you can learn how to tell if you can trust a housing ad!

TIPS FOR AVOIDING SCAMS:

NEVER send money for an apartment, house, or room rental without viewing the property first. Many scammers know that international or out of state students are looking for housing before they arrive in Utah; however, no legitimate landlord will ask you for your financial information (like your bank account number) or ask you to wire money (e.g., through Western Union or online through Paypal or Venmo) before you view the apartment. You should only pay a deposit and/or first month's rent after you have viewed the apartment and signed the lease.

If you go in person to view an apartment and the landlord says they have “forgotten the keys” or claims you cannot go inside before paying an application or ‘viewing’ fee, this is a SCAM. You should never have to pay in advance to view an apartment, room, or house for rent.

ALWAYS meet the landlord in person. You should always avoid situations that require you to provide personal or financial information or sign a lease electronically (via email, a website, etc.) before meeting the landlord in person. If the landlord tells you they are “out of the country” and can't meet with you in person to show you the rental property, this is most likely a scam.

AVOID ads with no pictures or blurry pictures. Sometimes scammers will post vague ads with low prices that provide few details and/or do not include pictures. These scam ads are designed to encourage people to make contact with the scammer via email - then, they will start asking for money or financial information. Avoid ads that have an “MLS” watermark. Sometimes scammers will illegally take photos from ads for houses that have been listed as “for sale” by a real estate agency and use them in their scam rental ad. These photos may have a watermark that says “MLS” (or, the “Multiple Listing Service”).

If it sounds “too good to be true”, it probably is!

Make sure you research common prices for housing in the neighborhood you are searching in. A large house with amazing features (swimming pool, gym, etc.) that is renting for a much lower price than similar houses in the area is probably a scam!
