

Copyrights - What You Can Do in Your Teaching

Often you can use works in your teaching without permission or fee. This chart highlights some of those situations. However, there are other circumstances where permission and/or fee are required (for example, when some types of works are included in course packs). Please contact a member of the Fulton Library or OGC with any questions.

	Exhibit materials in a live classroom?	Post materials to an online class?	Distribute readings?	Create electronic reserves?
Public Domain Works (U.S. Govt. works, pre-1928* works, and certain other works) <small>*as of January 1, 2023</small>	Yes	Yes	Yes	Yes
Your Own Works (if you kept copyright or reserved use rights)	Yes	Yes	Yes	Yes
Open Access Works (works available online without license, password, or technical restrictions)	Yes	LINK	LINK	LINK
Electronic Works Licensed by UVU (depends on license, but usually permitted)	Yes	LINK	LINK <small>(Most licenses also allow students to make an individual copy.)</small>	LINK
Electronic Works with a Creative Commons License (depends on license, but usually permitted; if not, LINK)	Yes	Yes	Yes	Yes
Other Works (when none of the above apply)	Yes	Yes, <small>if meets either TEACH Act or Fair Use standards. If not, LINK or seek permission.</small>	Yes, <small>if meets Fair Use standards. If not, LINK or seek permission.</small>	Yes, <small>if meets Fair Use standards. If not, LINK or seek permission.</small>