

Noorani Barkat

Noorani Barkat is doing her Ph.D. in agriculture from Washington State University. She is basically from Hunza Valley, Pakistan and is well familiar with challenges people face on mountains, that has motivated her to work for community upliftment by being a Global citizen. She was one of the speakers at International Women's of Mountain Conference in 2015 at Utah. She talked on "Status of education of girls and children in Pakistan" and that is how she got connected to Utah International Mountain Forum. She enjoys working on projects that address topics like peacebuilding, empowering youth especially girls, the role of women in agriculture, understanding the importance of diversity and the importance of education. She also wants to open schools for underprivileged children in the future. She has a list of hobbies and few of them are cooking, singing, reading and traveling.
