

Richard Farah

Born and raised in Kuwait to a Lebanese-Armenian family, growing up he was surrounded by different cultures. That led him to a drive to learn about cultures, history, and mythology. Originally wanting to go into history, during his final year of middle school, he learned more about the world of politics, and taking two political classes in high school inspired him to pursue that path. Now a UVU student, he is pursuing a major in Political science with a focus on Global Politics, and International Relations. After Graduating he plans to go for a Master's degree in the same field and to go work in Embassies.